Towards a Catalogue of Cleveland Publishing's Western Series. 6. A Preliminary Author-Sorted Index Combining All My Previous Lists

Anders N. Nilsson, Nordmaling, Sweden

[Version 1 July 2026]

The present list combines updated versions of lists 1-5 from this series, plus the two series of Cougar books covered earlier. The included 6,876 paperbacks and digest magazines thus covers Cleveland Publishing's 46 series based on western stories written by Australian authors (see Table 1 on last page). Works by American authors and non-western stories have been excluded. A few British authors are included, however. There are still lots of issues from the series studied unknown to me that hopefully will be possible to add in the future, heading for something close to 9,000 publications.

The present list is first sorted after the authors' real names, and then after titles. This means that authors using several pseudonyms do not have these separated. My reason for this way of sorting is that Cleveland did not strictly keep multiple pseudonyms apart, meaning that the same story in some cases appeared under different author names, like Gunn Halliday or Shad Denver. There are even examples of magazines with one name on the cover and another one on the title page. My way of sorting the titles ensures that all known reprints are listed together with the first editions.

There remains some unresolved author names used on the publications, at the moment not possible to characterize as real names or pseudonyms. For the time being, I have listed them as real names. Most of these names are represented by only few titles, with Jesse O'Neal's thirty entries being the main exception.

In order to help the computer sort the reprints correctly in chronological order, I have standardized the spelling of the titles, and thus hiding minor variants. I have not, however, addressed the problem of new titles used for old stories, so often created by Cleveland.

My list has 3,818 different titles, corresponding to 55% of all issues covered. Estimating the total number of issues published to 9,000 and assuming the same proportion of reprints would then result in a total number of 4,950 stories. This number then would have to be reduced, in order to compensate for Cleveland's frequent practice of giving old stories new titles. At a rough guess, let's believe that the Aussie western phenomenon amounts to 4,500 stories in 9,000 issues.

I have assigned a year to all included publications. As Cleveland did not use printed dates until 2008, my datings are based on a complex model combining information from printed prices, barcode labels, dates of earlier editions, and library catalogues. I here use revised dates after a major re-calibration of the longest series, Cleveland Western, based on dates when legal deposit copies were received by the NSW State Library, as given in their online catalogue. In general, the dates given in library catalogues are not to be trusted, chiefly because Cleveland's dates in reprints referring to some earlier editions have frequently been misunderstood as valid for the reprint itself.

The years used in my present list are thus only estimates, but most likely rarely with errors larger than one or two years. They are here used primarily for chronological sorting of reprints, which I do believe is safe.

In the names of the series here used "W" is an abbreviation for Western. And last but not least, your information about missing titles or errors is always welcome!
